Central Electric Power Cooperative hosted the 13th annual Energy in Today's Classroom in Jefferson City on July 30 – 31, 2025. Thirty-two teachers from around the state participated in the two-day event. The educators attending earned 15 hours of professional development, collaborative learning, and energy education instruction including energy fundamentals, economics of energy, electric vehicles, and residential solar. The teachers finished off the first day with a hands-on circuitry project. The second day was very busy with teachers touring a Central Electric Power Cooperative substation, and University of Missouri's Combined Cooling Heat and Power Plant. The teachers were also awarded many different teaching aids to be used in their classroom. This class will be held next year on July 29 – 30, 2026. If interested, please contact your local electric cooperative.
